Art Unit: 3676

1. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

2. Claims 1-11 and 14-17, 19 and 21 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-11 of U.S. Patent No. 6,659,175. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because the process of pending claims 1 and 14 can be construed broadly enough, e.g., in view of the claim language "A method ... comprising" to include the additional step in patent claims 1 and 11 of "preparing a material to be injected into an oil well". Further with regard to pending claim 14, as presently recited, the claim can further be construed broadly enough that steps a) and b) could be carried out simultaneously, in which case the tracer will necessarily become admixed with the "material of interest" during injection or introduction into the oil well.

Otherwise, the remaining pending claims appear to essentially correspond to the remaining patent claims with the observation that a hydraulic fracturing fluid would also comprise "a chemical stimulation fluid", as called for in pending claim 9 since it normally includes one or more chemicals and/or stimulates the formation.

3. Claim 12 is rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claim 8 of U.S. Patent No. 6,659,175 in view of Card et al (5,439,055).

In carrying out the embodiment of the patent claim 8 wherein the “material to be injected” comprises a hydraulic fracturing fluid, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to which the invention pertains to provide an exemplary proppant for the fracturing fluid comprising a mixture of propping agent and fibrous materials, wherein the fibrous material further comprises a chemical tracer within the porous matrix of such fibrous material, as taught by Card et al (note col. 6, lines 44-50; col. 18, lines 22-29), in order to provide a proppant pack of enhanced stability and resistance to flow back into the well, thus ensuring a steady release of the tracer.

4. Claim 13 is rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claim 1 of U.S. Patent No. 6,659,175 in view of Taylor, III et al (5,049,743).

In carrying out the method of the patent claim 1, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to which the invention pertains to provide an encapsulated chemical tracer for admixture with the “material to be injected”, as taught by Taylor, III et al (note col. 1, lines 26-44; col. 18, lines 22-29), in order to ensure or facilitate a steady release of the tracer into the formation.

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Art Unit: 3676

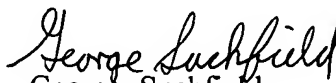

Other references disclose processes of treating or stimulating wells, including the use or introduction of a tracer(s).

6. Claims 18 and 20 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
